THERE is probably no other city of modern times that has been so characteristic in the making of history and unique events than ancient Santa Fe or the City of the Holy Faith. 'Tho, the echoes of chivalric conquests and turmoil still ring in her ears, and the furrows of her brow are blended with the scars of battle and rebellion; yet at this late day, retaining many of the customs and peculiarities of her earlier years, she lies in the beautiful valley of the Sangre de Cristo, a peaceful and modern city surrounded by the posterity of the chiefs and warriors so conspicuous in the strifes and struggles of the days of Spanish regime. Within her borders are graves of many missionaries and Spanish explorers who fell as victims to the ravages of the hostile Indians, and heroes of the days when conquest was rife, sleep in unmarked and unknown tombs, but those afflicted with tuberculosis in its first and second stages, time alone being a factor; and it is for the purpose of expediting and bringing about quicker and more beneficial results that Sunmount was established. Here the patient receives the full benefit of the pure and exhilarating mountain air, and the copious sunshine which so quickly tend to the up-building of his general health. Immediately upon taking up his residence one notices an infrequency of night sweats, an absence of fever, etc.; and almost invariably a gain in weight is noticeable from the very start. These facts together with the endorsements and recommendations of many of the leading physicians of the country are a positive assurance that tent life at Sunmount means restoration to health for those suffering from tubercular or bronchial diseases.

For the accommodation of Sunmount patients, an excellent herdic service has been established, so that those who desire to make visits to the city can do so, at an exceedingly low cost. Tours into the mountains and various places of interest near Santa Fe are features of frequent occurrence, and promote the health and strength of patients of this incomparable sanitarium.

One thing especially noticeable, in speaking of the climate of New Mexico, is that the Government, after four years of scientific investigation, has located two sanitariums there—the only sanitariums ever established by the Government.

Not a single case is on record of true tubercular consumption having originated in New Mexico. The children of consumptive parents coming to New Mexico grow up without the taint or predisposition to the disease.

Reverend Edward W. Meany, A. B., of Oxford, says: "Nature has marked out Santa Fe as the Sanitarium of the world, and a recognition of this fact must come sooner or later. In the Sanitary wealth of Santa Fe, the whole country possesses an inexhaustible mine of health-giving treasure."

The historic features of its past grow more and more interesting as the life of the ancient city progresses, but the hope for its future is as radiant as the sun that from day to day, without a cloud to mar its brightness, sets undimmed.
